End of the Year Reflection

This year I feel I grew a lot better in writing papers/essays like these. I could do it before, but not as quickly and efficiently. But now, I can write a decent paper like this within 5 to 10 minutes. I feel the reason I have improved is because of the many assignments we had almost every week where we had to write a paper, which I believe was a really good thing and it benefited me a lot. I also grew a lot more in word choice as well. At the beginning of the year, I was mostly using dull words and phrases. But now at this time, I feel I have better improved in that phase with the many lessons and assignments we had with those things.

I mostly enjoyed that the course was one of those courses where lots of information was thrown at you, but not too fast. I've been in classes where the teacher tries to shove information down your throat all the time, and I just couldn't do that. This class however, focused on a lot of things but at a steady pace where things could be well understandable. That's one of the main things I liked most about this class. I actually liked the paper assignments the most, for some reason I found fun out of it. I also liked the projects we had as well, because I put lots of work into them.

Overall I think this year was a good year for me in English. I say this because I've done fine in English before, but not as well as I did this year. Because of that, it shows that I am slowly improving. Thank you, Mr. Breslin, for helping me along the way this year.
